

INTRANET MANAGEMENT

Secure Employee Access for your Business Documents

An intranet is part of the organization's private network and functions as an internal, information sharing hotline. It functions as a thread that allows employees and different entities within an organization to communicate effectively.

Intranets often carry highly sensitive and classified data and act as a repository of important documents and records for an employee to access via a secure access code. A well-managed intranet significantly contributes to the effective functioning of any organization.

At Analytix, our experts understand that intranet management encompasses several different aspects, including the degree of access allowed to individuals within the organization. This also includes features allowing uploading and sharing of information, therefore requiring significant security measures.

The experts at Analytix understand the level of security required by intranet systems, particularly those that house high volumes of sensitive and confidential data.
